

Week One- Getting Acclimated and Feeling Aligned

Ella Biggins – Florida State University

There's no better feeling than starting your first week in a new position and feeling aligned with your firm's mission and the people who strive to accomplish the mission. From day one of training, the Rumberger staff was accommodating, kind, and motivated to produce skilled summer associates.

When I arrived in Tampa, my colleagues welcomed me with a bouquet of flowers. I couldn't believe the gorgeous view in my office. But there was no downtime—my first assignment was ready for me before I even completed my training (everyone knows a law student's least favorite thing is too much downtime!).

I enjoyed digging into my first research assignments and getting acclimated with everyone in the office during social events. I am looking forward to Week Two!
